It is said Assistant Jailer Wright will be retained but it is likely the others will go in spite of the fact Democracy abhors the spoils system.

Aside from historical papers written by members and the rude implements of the pioneers the Bucks County Historical Society is getting quite a collection of old documents and pictures that are quite interesting. Among the recent contributions are a portrait of Judge Henry Wynkoop, who represented Bucks county in the first Congress, 1789-90, presented by John S. Wurtz, a descendant; a section of Durham stove plate, cast in 1756, toy pieplates and samples of German fracteur work presented by Patrick Trainor; a picture of the monument erected to the memory of the 104th Pennsylvania, presented by General W. W. H. Davis. The rolls of Captain William McGill's Company, of the First Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Riflemen, recruited at Doylestown during the War of 1812, and Captain Prudy's company, recruited in Northampton, Southampton and Warminster townships for the same war, were presented by General W. W. H. Davis. The need of additional room becomes more urgent each day and when the new building is erected the Society will make a fine showing with its large collection.

COURT PROCEEDINGS.

November Criminal Court convened on Monday with nearly 30 cases on the list, but the rapid progress made on Monday indicated a short term. In his remarks to the Grand Jury Judge Yerkes called attention to the violation of a Doylestown ordinance prohibiting the burning of leaves in the streets. The most exciting incident of the first session was the appearance of Constable Scheid, of Quakertown, in an advanced state of intoxication. He was fined $20. George Harrison, of Hulmeville, was appointed foreman of the Grand Jury. The following cases were heard:

Sentence was suspended in the case of Louis Erbach, who pleaded guilty to the charge of forgery. Erbach is a Russian and promised to leave the country if set at liberty.

George Brown, colored, pleaded guilty to the charge of larceny and was sent to the penitentiary for three years. He stole jewelry, clothing and money from Mrs. Thoma B. Linton, who resides near New town.

Alfred Hunter, of Bristol, was sent to the penitentiary for ten years upon being convicted of sodomy.

Lizzie Wagner, of Bethlehem, pleaded guilty to the theft of clothing, the property of George W. Moser, of Quakertown, and was sent to the county jail for a year.

Adam Shilling, charged with the theft of barber's implements, the property of John Peze, of Morrisville, was aquitted on the ground that he had been given the custody of the implements by his employer.

Frank Thompson, colored, was sent to the pententiary for one year, having pleaded guilty to a charge of theft.

Upon the grounds that he was insane, Adam Loebsack, of Bristol, was acquitted of the charge of assault preferred by his wife. He will be removed to the State Hospital for the Insane.

Joseph and Kate Douglass, of Bristol, charged with nuisance were convicted. Douglass went to jail for a month and the woman for three months.

Richard McFadden, of Langhorne, pleaded guilty to the charge of nuisance and resisting an officer. Having been in jail before, he was sent to the penitentiary for 18 months.

James Brown, colored, of Bristol, was convicted of the same offence and sent to jail for ten days. He took a pledge to abstain from the use of strong drink.

Charles Cooper and Thomas Murray, charged with violation of the law prohibiting the importation of cattle into this state without inspection, were acquited. The evidence showed that the cattle had been inspected in New Jersey and were not diseased when brought here. The act of 1897, under which prosecution was lodged provides that no dairy or meat cattle shall be imported into Pennsylvania for breeding purposes unless accompanied by a certificate showing that they have been examined and are free from disease. This certificate must be accompanied by the surgeon's certificate showing his authority to make such examinations.

The defendants introduced certificates which Dr. Cooper, of Trenton, the examining surgeon, identified as his. The certificate of examination was objected to on the ground that it did not show that tuberculine test had been made as required by law, and the surgeon's certificate on the gound that it was dated 1902, instead of the date of the certificate of examination. They were both admitted in evidence, not to justify under the statute, but to rebutt the presumption to criminal intent, by showing a bona fida attempt to comply with the requirements of the law. The court instructed the jury that according to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States the test of criminal intent applied to statutory crimes as well as to common law crimes and that, therefore, they should consider whether this defendant was guilty of the intent to violate the provisions of this act. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

William Hewitt, of Bristol, was acquitted of the charge of stealing chickens from an Italian residing in that town. It was suggested that Hewitt take the pledge, but he declined. It is said he belongs to a good family and has held responsible positions at Altoona and Hollidaysburg, having a family in the latter place. Strong drink led to his downfall.

James Smith, of Bristol colored, was acquitted of the charge of resisting an officer but was directed to pay costs and enter bonds in the suit of $1000 to appear at next court to answer to the charge of inciting to riot.

Edward Rue, of Morrisville, was acquitted of the charge of stealing a purse containing $15, the property of Mrs. Flannigan. Witness testified that the woman was intoxicated when the money was lost.

A Violent Attack of Croup Cured.

"Last winter an infant child of mine had croup in a violent form," says Elder John W. Rogers, a Christian Evangelist, of Filley, Mo. "I gave her a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and in a short time all danger was past and the child recovered." This remedy not only cures croup, but when given as soon as the first symptoms appear, will prevent the attack. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by Emlen Martin, druggist.

An officer in battle happening to bow, a cannon-ball passed over his head, and took off the head of a soldier who stood behind him. "You see," said he, "That a man never loses by politeness."

A Good Thing.

German Syrup is the special prescription of Dr. A. Boschee, a celebrated German physician, and is acknowledged to be one of the most fortunate discoveries in medicine. It quickly cures coughs, colds and all lung troubles of the severest nature, removing, as it does, the cause of the affection and leaving the parts in a strong and healthy condition. It is not an experimental medicine, but has stood the test of years, giving satisfaction in every case, which its rapidly increasing sale every season confirms. Two million bottles sold annually. Boschee's German Syrup was introduced in the United States in 1868, and is now sold in every town and village in the civilized world. Three doses will relieve any ordinary cough. Price 75 cents. Get Green's Special Almanac. At J. Edward Wright's and Emlen Martin's drug stores, Bristol, and E. E. Johnson's, Tullytown.

Rev. A. S. Pittenger, of Trenton, for several years pastor of our chapel here, has moved with his family to Philadelphia, but he will continue to conduct the services on Sunday evenings as heretofore. Members and friends of the chapel who own horses will take turns to convey him from and to the nearest railroad station.

The farmers have been blessed with very favorable weather for their fall work. Turnips for seed are about all pulled and buried and husking corn is now the general order of the day. Owing to the scarcity of help the husking is progressing rather slowly, and there will be some complaint of cold fingers yet before the corn is all cribbed.

On Monday, while Mrs. Charles M. and Miss Leola Mershon were driving to Tullytown, their young horse took fright at Carnahan's Hill, turned about short, upset the wagon and threw the occupants out. But for the timely aid of Ed. Anderson, who saw the proceedings, it might have proven serious. As it was they got out of the dilemma this time with only a scare to remember.

The oyster supper held in the chapel on Saturday evening was a grand success in every particular. Much credit is due the ladies interested who worked hard to gain this achievement. The tables were loaded with an abundance of inviting palatable edibles in many varieties, and it was pleasing to see the large attendance come and sit down and enjoy themselves on the rare occasion. A vote of thanks is extended to all patrons who helped make it a success. A handsome net sum was realized for the chapel.

There seems to be a boom of late in real estate in the Manor. Several farms have changed ownership. The Charles Buckman farm near Turkey Hill was sold at $75 an acre. George White, adjoining this place, is the purchaser. The William S. Mull farm changed hands with David Moore, of the Manor. The George Updike farm, owned by Charles McIntyre, it is reported, has been traded off to B. F. Taylor, of Bristol, for the latter's farm on Bile's Island, lately owned by Robert L. Muschert. On last Saturday the Hugh Sterling farm, now occupied by Joseph Beck, was sold at public sale to John Fish, of Camden, N. J., for $51.75 per acre.

YARDLEY.

Mrs. Dovitah has returned from a visit to friends at Mt. Clair, N. J.

On Sunday last T. S. Cadwallader and his family spent the day with friends at Buckingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson Wilson, of Philadelphia, were guests of Mrs. Letitia W. Twining on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Behm, and their daughter, are spending some time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton.

Miss Anna Comfort has returned to Yardley and is at present staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Knowles.

Mrs. Harry Lear, who was under the care of Dr. Wareham, was sent to the University Hospital to receive treatment for rheumatism.

A sister of the late Thomas Girton, Harriet Girton, of Baker's Basin, N. J., was buried in the stone graveyard below Yardley on Monday. The funeral service were held in the Methodist Church of this place.

The supper held in the Odd Fellows' Hall by the members of the A. M. E. Church was a success from every point of view, as the proceeds of the affairs were about $50 and the supper a credit to the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Watson G. Large gave a supper to a number of their friends on Wednesday evening, and on Tuesday evening a number of the ladies of Mrs. Large's acquaintances were entertained by that lady.

Dr. E. C. Hancock has returned to his home after an extended gunning trip in the western part of the State. The doctor was very successful in his quest for game, having killed many birds and rabbits, some of which he brought home with him.

The water tank that is to be used to store water for the Yardley water system, has arrived on the ground, and it will be immediately put together and put on the tower that stands on the school house hill. The tank has a capacity of thirty thousand gallons.

On Monday evening the electric lights were so poor that the residents of this town were forced to get their oil lights out to keep the others company for they were sore in spirit, and far from having light hearts. It would be a good time to improve this system of lighting, as it has for a long time been very inferior.

On November the 12th there was a meeting of the directors of the library and a committee was appointed consisting of Mrs. Thomas C. Knowles, Mrs. E. C. Smith and Mrs. Letitia W. Twining, to go to Philadelphia and select new books. At the entertainment given some time ago, to raise funds for the library, quite a sum of money was acquired and it is the purpose of the directors to use this money in the near future for improvements to the building.

The option the Yardley, Morrisville & Trenton Railway Company have on the Trenton bridge which their cars cross, will close on the 21st. The company agreed to buy this bridge for the sum of $200,000, of which amount they have paid $40,000 leaving a balance of $160,000 still due the bridge people. It is a question in the mind of the public as to whether the option will be carried over, and whether the company will desire to have it so. From all indications the road is barely paying the expenses of the railway company, and as the service has been so poor lately the public have lost faith in the cars, and prefer to drive or go on a train to Trenton, rather than be "held up" for several hours on the road.

St. Andrew's Church was the scene of a pretty wedding on the 11th, when Miss Helen White was joined in marriage to William Brodie, of Orange N. J., The church was tastefully decorated with many kinds of flowers. As the bridal party entered the church Mrs. Charles M. Eames played the wedding march, and when the prayer in the ceremony came, Miss Helen Swartzlander sang "Oh Perfect Love." After the wedding a wedding breakfast was served to the immediate relatives and friends. After a short wedding trip the newly married couple will make their home in Orange, N. J., where the groom is employed as assistant superintendent in the Edison Manufacturing Works.

Dr. Bassett and Harry South, while driving along the railroad, had the misfortune to be thrown from the carriage as a result of the horse running away. The animal became frightened at a whistle of one of the New York flyers on the Reading road, as it crossed the bridge and precipitated the two men in the gutter and then it climbed the fence and did a few stunts in the large field along the railroad from which point it discovered several little children playing in the street and it immediately wandered its way at a rate of about forty miles an hour towards the children, who, when they saw the ambitious creature coming their way immediately became busy and disappeared, midst the yells of the frantic mothers and the cry of warning from the doctor and his driver.

Anthony Denihan had the misfortune to lose a valuable horse on Monday. Mr. Denihan was driving a team of horses towards his home on the Newtown pike when at the point of the road that leads to the bridge that crosses the creek at Headley's he dropped the tail board from the back of the wagon and got out to get it; while he was after the board one of the lines on the off side horse fell to the ground and when he returned he started his team before he discovered that he had access to but one of the lines. The ground here being quite a hill, the horses were not long in getting into a good trot, and as they neared the lane that turns off into the Nikleson quarry, they prepared to turn off into it, but not giving themselves enough room, they went off the abutment of the bridge, and in so doing some of the timber was broken out, and a large splinter entered the belly of the offside horse and so ripped him that it was necessary to kill the poor beast to get him out of his suffering, which was done by Dr. Willard, by hitting the horse in the head with an axe.

A puny child is always an anxiety to the parents. There seems no reason why the little one should be weak when it is so well fed. But the fact is that it does not matter now much food the child takes if the stomach cannot extract the nourishment from it. No benefit can be derived from just eating. That is the condition of many a sickly child. The stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition are not doing their work, and the body is really starving. It is little use to give fish foods, like cod liver oil or emulsions, in such cases, because these also have to be digested; they may lighten the stomachs labor but they don't strengthen it. Strength is what the stomach needs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach, nourishes the nerves and increases the action of the blood making glands. It is superior to every other preparation for children's use, on account of its body building qualities, and also because it is pleasant to the taste and contains no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are a valuable aid when the bowels are irregular. They are small. Children take them readily.

A monument will shortly be erected in Washington to the poet Longfellow.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1902.

Since the disfranchisement of the negro vote in the South, the Democratic majorities no longer show up larger than the total votes.

The revelation made by the official count in Allegheny county showing that Pennypacker's plurality was over 48,000, caused the Philadelphia North American to execute a torture dance.

It is announced by one of Senator Hanna's closest friends that the Senator will retire from active politics at the close of his present term as Senator. Under no condition will he allow the use of his name in connection with the Presidency.

Mr. Cleveland's fear that the Republicans would steal "tariff reform" away from the Democrats smacked a good deal of the campaign orator, and was hardly up to the usual Cleveland utterance—ponderous, but measurably sincere. There is a large and deep chasm between Democratic tariff reform and Republican revision of the tariff.

The threatened renaissance of Bryan and Bryanism failed at the November elections. Populism has been thrown overboard. Now comes the union of Democracy and Socialism. Hill was foresighted in seeing the trend of affairs, but the attempt to array masses against classes is doomed to the same miserable failure as Bryan's fiasco in '96.

William Bryan, in his Commoner, declares that David B. Hill is a "shallow exponent of the principles of Democracy." That other peerless Democrat, William Devery, in language less poetic makes David a little mole Hill by declaring he is a "load for a hearse." A careful perusal of the Commoner lends one to the conclusion that there is only one real thing left in the Democratic leadership line and his domicile is on the banks of the shallow Platte.

As a result of the high price of coal, due to the recent strike, the attention of the public has been turned to oil as a fuel. A great many oil burners have been fitted in private houses, and are apparently giving satisfaction. If adopted to any great extent the coal operators will not be able to maintain the monopoly against which there has been so much complaint in the past. Then a dispute between the operators and labor will not find the general public such helpless victims.

The esteemed Sellersville Herald, which usually looks at the business end of a proposition, has figured up for Messrs. Zane and Cressman, the Assembly nominees, their salaries and legal allowances as members of the Legislative. The Herald is right on the $1500 salary, $100 for postage, $50 for stationary and about $150 for mileage. In addition to the items mentioned each member receives a collection of trinkets, and his desk will contain a pocket knife, brush and comb, paper knife, letter opener, etc. Soap and towels should be furnished some of the members after particularly strenuous sessions.

The "Democrat" Having Sport.

Doylestown Democrat.

Captain Frank G. Edwards, the lucky fusionist who won out on November 4 against the most strenuous efforts that the Big Four machine could put forth, came to Doylestown on Saturday afternoon on a visit. This was the Captain's first appearances here since the election and he was warmly congratulated upon his successful fight with the Republican ring.

The Captain was met at the Reading station by Sheriff B. Frank Hobensack, holding the ribbons over a pair of spanking bays to a road wagon. The two took a short drive in the beautiful country surrounding the county seat and the Captain then dined with the Sheriff.

The visit of the Independent Republican Representative-elect created considerabld consternation at the Republican headquarters. One of the faithful carried the news to Chairman Shelly the moment the Captain alighted from the train. At headquarters the stalwarts greatly deplored the fact that Sheriff Hobensack was entertaining the distinguished visitor. "This will never do," they said, but neither the Sheriff nor the Captain seemed to be much worried about what the machine leaders here thought or said about his visit. Captain Edwards returned to Bristol on one of the evening trains.

Kind Words From the Dead.

Elbert Hubbard.

Once upon a day an old man made a will.

He mentioned me in this will.

He called me his faithful and loving friend, and bequeathed to me his silver watch, I was never before so touched by a gift, or the mention of my name.

A lawyer read the will in the parlor, after the funeral—a room filled with the close, sickening odor of flowers. The dead man called me his faithful and loving friend! I wept salt tears of joy, and only regretted that I had not been a better friend to him and everybody.

The old man could have given me the watch without an extra word, and even this would have told much. But he gave it with a kind word and loving thought.

We say many generous things about the dead, but what a thrill of joy is caused when the dead say things about the living! Everybody should make a will, and write it himself, even if he has nothing to give but a silver watch and a kind word.

A Remarkable Pulpit.

The Mechlin Cathedral pulpit is regarded as the second finest in the world, the finest having been done by the same artist for the cathedral in Brussels. It is made of oak, and the figures of Christ and of the women are life size. The sounding board is formed by oak leaves twined with those of a grapevine. The stem of the latter rises naturally from the ground at the entrance to the pulpit, which is apparently hewn out of a rock. The preacher stands under the shadow of the leaves, the cross at his right hand. Below him and in front of the pulpit, forming a part of the base, is a horse which has thrown its rider. It looks as though some impious horseman had approached Calvary heedlessly and been hurled to destruction over a precipice. The explanation of the design is not given by the guide at the cathedral nor in any book, so visitors and regular worshipers are at liberty to interpret it to please themselves.

Governor Elect Visits Editor Sardman.

Schwensville Item.

Governor-elect Samuel W. Pennypacker honored this office with a visit on Friday. He is exceedingly happy over his election and said: "One of my great sources of satisfaction is that the Governorship will come to Pennypacker's Mills on the Perkiomen." He spent the day on his farms.

It is a noticeable fact that the melancholy individual who maintains that life is not worth living always wears a chest protector and over-shoes.

STANDARD OIL PRODUCT.

North Wales Record.

No matter what other things in common use have gone up in price, the supply of kerosene oil and all the products of the petroleum refineries is not only cheap and abundant, but practically inexhaustible. Is it not possible that in later generations, with improved methods of use, petroleum may to a great extent displace anthracite in the great industrial establishments and in the households also?

CARTOONS PRINTED FOR CASH, HOWEVER.

Doylestown Intelligencer.

Contrary to the ideas of some good people, the newspaper is a private investment. It is supported by the public in the same way that a dry goods house is supported. It presents its wares and asks people to buy them. It is not a hopper into which the public is privileged to pour into it thoughts that every man and woman chooses to write. The Intelligencer is liberal in its treatment of correspondents—in fact it encourages contributions to its columns under the heading of 'Letters to the Editor"—but we reserve the right to say what shall go into the columns of the paper.

A QUIET SHOT AT RICE.

Doylestown Republican.

Notwithstanding the fact that he has some reason to boast of his victory we haven't heard from Captain Frank G. Edwards since the election decided a hard-fought battle in his favor. Captain Edwards is to be congratulated for not burdening the public with vainglorious harangues, especially when he was the chief factor that contributed to the defeat of the Republican party. This trait in his character has much to do with his personal popularity and in a measure explains his success.

The county officials elect will undoubtedly give satisfaction and conduct the business of the county properly.

RED INK IN CONGRESS.

Perkasie News.

William Hearst, editor of the New York Journal has been elected to Congress. We expect, now, to see that delicious publication, the Congressional Record, appear with double column display heads, and choice illustrations. It may also contain advertising matter on why Trust matches, sugar, coal oil, rope, etc., are the best—or worst, and a thousand lines or more on the Panama Canal, or Army Canteen. It is a pity Thomas Edison, B. F. Keith, and Forepaugh are not members. A yellow journal taking notes, a phonograph taking talks, a biograph busy on moving pictures and a circus man cracking his whip, would make a jolly circus—and a continuous performance. And very many cities would think they were getting more for their money than they used to.

EDITOR READING ON TRAITORS.

Hatboro Journal.

With Cleveland, Hill and Pattison masquerading as the "God head" of Democracy, there is nothing left for the Democrats except the "solid south" with these gold headed and silk stockinged gentry, who helped sell out the party in '96, in the saddle, and the tickets loaded down with men who deserted the party when it tried men's souls to be decidedly in support of Democratic principles. It will be a long time before the Democratic party will poll six and a half million votes as they did in '96 for the presidency with these men in the lead, there must be leaders that will not sell the party out if placed in power. Cleveland, Hill and Pattison are ever ready to lead in their own behalf, and will stand on a red hot stove for a platform, what advantage is it to Democratic principles to gain the whole country and be bartered away?

SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

MR. AND MRS. JOSHUA BATEMAN, OF WHEAT SHEAF, HAVE MANY GUESTS IN HONOR OF THE OCCASION.

Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Bateman, of Wheat Sheaf, celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary on last Saturday evening, November 15.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Bateman was aglow with brilliant lights and flowers and the mingling of music and the happy voices of many friends and relatives from far and near made the occasion of the silver wedding celebration one long to be remembered. The guests commenced to arrive at four o'clock and it was eight o'clock before the last put in an appearance.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with flowers, the sitting room being reserved for games, in which nearly all participated. Music was rendered by Miss A. Katheryn Kellmayer, of Philadelphia; singing by Miss Lizzie Kellmayer, Miss Clara Mae Dickel, Miss Susie S. Bruton, Miss Anna Sweet, and trios by Miss Katheryn Kellmayer, Miss Laura Barton and Jesse Bromley. Dancing was indulged in from 10 till 11.30.

Dinner was served from 6 to 10 p. m., the dining room being beautifully decorated with flowers and autumn leaves. In the centre of each table was a large wedding cake.

One of the most attractive features of the evening was the display of handsome and expensive presents artistically arranged on two large tables in the north end of the parlor. The gifts consisted of sterling silver, cut glass and fine china, pictures, bic-a-brac, linens, etc. Fortunately there were but few duplicates.

The invited guests were: Miss Viola Mae Bateman, William Wise, Frank Bertele Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lafferty and daughter, the Misses Rose and Anna Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sweet, Miss Anna and Frank Sweet, Mrs. George Bruton and daughter, Mrs. Maria Wright, Mr. and Mrs. John Sholl, Samuel Headley, Mr and Mrs. Joseph Headley, Mrs. William Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. William Wright, the Misses Marion, Mabel and Mary Wright, Messrs. Harvey, Clifford and Isaac Wright, of Wheat Sheaf; Mr. and Mrs. David Daley, Mr. and Mrs. David Pancoast, Mrs. Charles Smith and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Muschert, Mrs. William Wilks, Miss Clara Mae Dickel, Mr. and Mrs. Albret Wilks and daughter, of Penn Valley; William Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Rue, of Edgely; Mr. and Mrs. Van Horn, of Emilie; Joseph Van Horn, Mrs. Mary V. Van Horn, of Laurel Bend; Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Bateman, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Sickel, Leon Sickel, of Fallsington; Mr. and Mrs. Scarborough, Edward Scarborough, of Penns Manor; Mrs. Abner Cox, Mr. and Mrs. William Larue, of Tullytown; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sickles, Merrill Sickels, of Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Whilldey, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Shores, Messrs. Harry and William Shores, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carter, Charles Carter, Miss Laura Barton, Jesse Bromley, of Bristol; Misses A. Katheryn and Lizzie Kellmayer, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Hix: "I don't take any stock in these faith cures brought by the laying on the hands." Mrs. Dix: "Well, I do; I cured my little boy of the cigarette habit in that way."

Nell: "Why is it that a girl can never catch a ball like a man?" Bell: "A man is so much larger and easier to catch."

PHILADELPHIA AMUSEMENTS.

BROAD STREET THEATRE.

"A Chinese Honeymoon," the tuneful musical comedy—the brightest, wittiest and best of all the comic opera importations of the last decade—the daintiest, the most radiant glimmer of rainbow colorings, sumptuously and most artistically arranged, with its wealth of electrical effects and modern contrivances, and the magnificence of the most extravagant costumes of two continents can scheme, fresh from its uninterrupted success at the New York Casino and now running in its third year in London, the greatest of all Metropoli, Nixon & Zimmerman's elaborate production will, on Monday, November 24th, and for a period of a few weeks thereafter, be seen at the Broad Street Theatre, appealing to the Philadelphians once again, the scene of its original American triumph.

The company presenting this elaborate spectacle, interspersed with the brightest and most tuneful melodies, English and American composers could harmonize, will be presented by a cast, the equal of which has seldom, if ever, been seen—John E. Henshaw, familiar to all theatre goers, Edna Huntor, Adele Ritchie, Thos. Q. Seabrook, Katie Barrie, Mrs. Yeamans, Wm. Pruett, Van Rensellaer Wheeler, Amelia Stone, Wm. Burrows, H. W. Trendenick, George Butler, Edith Barr and Adele Phillips, will be seen under the radiant glare of the calcium of their personal and artistic finish and an engagement of the rarest delight may be anticipated by all lovers of the beautiful in spectacular, musical compositions and stage arrangements.

As will be noted by the date, it will be a Thanksgiving attraction, with the regular matinees Wednesday and Saturday, and a special holiday matinee Thanksgiving.

Everyone knows the show—the Broad Street Theatre is the place, and November 24th the date, in the vernacular of the urchin, the gamin and clerk, "It's up to you."

"THE SLEEPING BEAUTY AND THE BEST."

In keeping with the coming holiday season, Nixon & Zimmerman will present as their Thanksgiving offering at the Chestnut Street Opera House, on Monday evening, Nov. 24, Klaw & Erlanger's stupendous production of the famous Drury Lane fairy extravaganza, "The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast." This will be Philadelphia's first taste of one of those big English spectacles which have given to the Drury Lane Theatre, (London) a reputation as the greatest play-producing house in the world.

"The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast," was imported to this country by Klaw an Erlanger just a year ago and was first shown in New York City at Broadway Theatre, where it enjoyed a run of seven months, testing the capacity of that capacious play-house at all performances.

This year it duplicated its New York success for ten successive weeks at the Illinois Theatre, Chicago, and is at present the attraction at Nixon & Zimmerman's Alvin Theatre, Pittsburg, for two weeks. The massiveness of this attraction is best known from the fact that ten sixty-foot baggage cars, six Pullman sleepers and six day coaches are required to bring the company and scenic effects from the City of Smoke to Philadelphia.

The company numbers close to five hundred persons; four hundred actually appear in the interpretation of the extravaganza, while a force of 100 stage mechanists are required to handle the stage effects.

Klaw & Erlanger have given to the theatre-going public many important productions, but in the present instance they have eclipsed all previous efforts, sparing no expense. They have kept intact the original company which made the extravaganza popular in New York. The principals in the interpreting cast are Harry Bulger, Joe Cawthorne, Wm. Macart, John Hyams, Leila McIntyre, Viola Gillette, Phoebe Coyne, Gertrude MacKensie, Queenie Vassar, Almira Forrest, Annabell Whitford, Katharine Colvin, and the Grigolatis troupe of Aerialists, who created a profound sensation all over Europe two years ago.

HENRIETTA CROSMAN.

The approaching engagement of Miss Henrietta Crosman at the Academy of Music in Philadelphia has aroused great interest in that city and vicinity. It was a master stroke on the part of Miss Crosman and her manager, Maurice Campbell, that enabled the star to appear in Philadelphia this season in the "Sword of the King," her new spectacular comedy and drama, which in the long run at Wallack's Theatre aroused New York to the greatest admiration for this talented artiste. Attempts have been made by rival theatrical interests to exclude Miss Crosman from Philadelphia where it was well known she was decidedly popular and there was a strong desire to see her in the play in which she had won high praise. This opposition was successfully combated in Miss Crosman's behalf, by her manager taking an absolute lease of the Academy of Music. No better playhouse in Philadelphia could be had for Miss Crosman in "The Sword of the King." It is a massive production, elaborate in scenic effect and with innumerable auxiliaries, so that only on a big stage could it be adequately presented. The stage of the Academy of Music is admirable suited to the production. That Philadelphia welcomes Miss Crosman's coming is already proven in the inquiries about her engagement and the demand for seats. The verdict of every dramatic writer in New York was that in "The Sword of the King" Miss Crosman achieved the most remarkable triumph of her dramatic career. That this verdict received public endorsement was shown by the fact that during her entire engagement at Wallack's Theatre she played to crowded houses, while hundreds were turned away.

GARRICK THEATRE.

There has not been such a pronounced success of the lighter musical entertainments seen in Philadelphia in years, as "Dolly Varden," which entered upon the second week of its engagement at the Garrick Theatre, on Monday evening. It has served to introduce Miss Lulu Glaser as a star of the first magitude and allows her opportunity to display her exceptional powers as a comedienne and prima donna to the best possible advantage. Fred G. Whitney, the organizer of the company has surrounded his pretty star with a splendid company and set the entire production in a most beautiful mounting.

Stanislaus Stange has written "Dolly Varden" in two acts. The first takes place on a beautiful terrace in the Gardens of Beauchamp Towers on-Thames, near London, the splendid residence of Miss Leilia Fairfax. The second act transpires in the reception hall of Beauchamp Towers. The action is supposed to cover a period of two days. The time is 1730, only a short time after George I comes over from Hanover to reign on the English throne. The court customs instituted by Queen Anne, both as to etiquette and dress, were yet in vogue and the brilliancy and the splendor of the court of the gay Louis XV were also having their effect in England. Probably at no time before or since has the English court been so beautifully and artistically dressed as at this time. This fact has given Mr. Whitney an opportunity to show how lavishly and expensively and yet artistically a comic opera may be costumed. He has spared no money in the accomplishment of this. During the performance Miss Glaser has four changes of costumes and each will be a surprise. The first dress is the simple little country dress which is supposed to be worn in Hampshire. The next is called the Little Dolly Varden dress, with caught up skirt. The next is a resplendant court dress in which Miss Glaser displays her jewels. The last is the bridal dress which is a triumph of the dressmaker's art.

The cast that will support Miss Glaser are all well-known artists who have been associated with the best operatic organizations in the country, and are as follows: Mark Smith, Tom Daniel, Harry Girard, Albert Parr, Edward Martindell, Edmund Mulkay, Estelle Wentworth, Ada Palmer Walker and Celia Quinn.

There are twenty-four musical numbers in "Dolly Varden," which means that more than half of the performance will be devoted to music. All of this music is of a light character, excepting two numbers, which border on the serious. The titles of the most popular songs in "Dolly Varden" are "The Cannibal Maid," "The Lay of the Jay," "I Love My Dolly's Ankles and Her Feet," "He Who Forsakes the Flag of His Land," "My Ship's the Girl for Me" and "Lovers' Lane."

There will be a special matinee of "Dolly Varden" given at the Garrick Theatre on Thanksgiving Day.

BASKET BALL

WILMINGTON OVERWHELMED.

The Wilmington National League team, the champions of last year's American League, made its first appearance in Bristol under National League colors on Saturday evening and proved themselves no match for Bristol's "little five." The home team scored at will and in the forty minutes of play twenty-eight field goals were scored for a total of fifty-six points, and one from offence, being over a field goal a minute.

The game lost interest and demonstrated that if the Delaware team wishes to trot in fast society it will have to strengthen up very materially.

Hough broke his record of last year which time he scored twelve field goals on March 22 aginst Millville. In Saturday's game he landed thirteen. Seeing that the game was well in hand, Captain Klein retired and gave way to Len Plant; Mulliner substituted Everingham and Mellick took the place of John Plant. The first half ended 26 to 4. The final score was 57 to 8. The line-up:

Bristol	Positions	Wilmington
Klein, L. Plant	forward	Keen, Loose
Hough	forward	Holt
Everingham, Mulliner	centre	Walker
J. Plant, Mellick	guard	Reynolds
Bonnett	guard	Harrison

Goals from field—Hough 13, Klein 5, L. Plant 3, Mellick 2, Bennett 2, Mulliner 1, Everingham 1, J. Plant 1, Reynolds 2, Holt 1. Goals from offence—Mulliner 1, Keen 1, Walker 1. Offences—Bennett 4, L. Plant 3, Everingham 2, Hough 1, Walker 3, Reynolds 2, Keen 2, Holt 1. Referee—Schoenut.

BRISTOL 26—BURLINGTON 12.

The National League season was opened in Burlington on Tuesday when Bristol visited the pretty Jersey town and administered the second defeat to Burlington this season. The old Birch Opera House has been transformed into a basket ball hall and while the arrangements were not completed for the comfort of the patrons the big crowd was good natured. Over a thousand people were present. Bristol won by the score of 26 to 12. The line-up:

Bristol.	Positions.	Burlington.
Klein	forward	Morgan
Hough	forward	Wick
Mulliner	centre	Oves, Reeves
Bennett	guard	Conley
Plant	guard, Reeves, McCullough

Goals from field—Klein 4, Hough 7, Bennett 1, Wick 3, Morgan 1. Goals from offence—Klein 2, Reeves 4. Offences—Klein 2, Hough 2, Bennett 1. Plant 3, Wick 1, Reeves 1, Conley 2, McCullough 1. Referee—Schoenhut.

BASKET BALL CHAT.

New York Saturday night.

Bleacher tickets are now sold in advance at the Bristol News Agency.

Manager Smith was present at the Wilmington game on Saturday.

Bleacher tickets will hereafter be sold at a separate window at the auditorium.

It will be Sandy Shields' first experience in Bristol since he played with the home team.

It will be a battle royal on Saturday night. New York is in splendid condition and is playing championship ball. The Wanderers claim that Bristol is their best floor. Look out for sparks.

The advance sale of tickets for Saturday has been large and the greatest crowd of the season will be present to see the "little five" tan the jackets of the New York giants.

Bristol is now tied with Camden for first place. Each team has won five games and lost one. The result of Saturday's contest with New York means much to Bristol. While the local five will be wrestling with the heavy Gothamites Camden will have Wilmington as a soft proposition.

There is no truth in the published reports that Klein will not finish the season with Bristol. Klein has no thought of leaving Bristol. Manager Smith has now sole control of the Bristol franchise and while he is also managing a Manchester basket ball team Klein is the practical manager of the Bristol team. Frank Streeper is acting in the capacity of Mr. Smith's business agent.

Proverbs

"When the butter won't come put a penny in the churn," is an old time dairy proverb. It often seems to work though no one has ever told why.

When mothers are worried because the children do not gain strength and flesh we say give them Scott's Emulsion.

It is like the penny in the milk because it works and because there is something astonishing about it.

Scott's Emulsion is simply a milk of pure cod liver oil with some hypophosphites especially prepared for delicate stomachs.

Children take to it naturally because they like the taste and the remedy takes just as naturally to the children because it is so perfectly adapted to their wants.

For all weak and pale and thin children Scott's Emulsion is the most satisfactory treatment.

We will send you the penny, i. e., a sample free.

Might Cure Him.

"You look seedy, Jones, my boy," remarked Brown, as the two men met at luncheon-time. "Got a splitting headache," replied Jones; "I'm nearly mad with it." "Ah, you ought to get married," said Brown. "Look at me. I went home last night with a vile headache myself, but my wife petted and kissed me, and dabbed cologne on my brow, and in ten minutes the pain had quite gone." "Um," said Jones, reflectively. Then, after a moment's pause, he continued, "Do you think your wife will be at home this afternoon, Brown?" Brown's reply was not fit for publication.

"You were always a fault-finder," growled the wife. "Yes, dear," responded the husband meekly; "I found you."

"What induced her to tell you her real age?" "It was her birthday party, and I was giving her a kiss for each year."

ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT SOLD.

STOCKS OF BRISTOL COMPANY DISPOSED OF TO TRENTON CAPITALISTS—RUMORS OF GAS COMPETITION

Anthony R. Kuser, of Trenton, N. J., has purchased seventy per cent of the Bristol Electric Light and Power Company and the syndicate which he represents will take possession of the plant upon December 1st. The par value of the stock is twenty-five dollars per share and holders of seventy per cent of the stock accepted Mr. Kuser's offer of thirty-seven dollars and fifty cents per share. In negotiating the sale stipulation was made that all stockholders be given an opportunity to accept the same offer. The remaining holders of shares were accordingly notified that if they desired to accept such terms and agree to such sale they could do so.

Mr. Kuser is prominently connected with a syndicate with millions of dollars at its command which owns and operates gas and electric light plants and street railways. His company now supplies gas to the towns between Trenton and Camden, a twelve inch main being used between the points and three million feet of gas supplied daily. Yardley and Morrisville plants are also operated by the same financial interests.

It is fair to presume that the wealthy corporation has not purchased the Bristol electric light plant for the purpose of operating it by itself. Mr. Kuser's syndicate is heavily interested in gas plants and it is not idle speculation to suppose that either the local gas works will be purchased or a competing system established. It is not believed that the syndicate's immense capital to invest has purchased the electric light plant and will continue to operate that little business singly.

Father Huntington's Visit.

Editor Gazette:—The imposing and dignified services conducted in St. James Church, Bristol, during the past week by Rev. James O. S. Huntington, Superior of the Order of the Holy Cross, in the presence of large congregations were uplifting and inspiring and will linger for time to come in the minds of those who were present. The spiritual influence of Rev. Huntington is something which those who are subject to his ministrations alone can speak of, but there can be no doubt that the influence which he exercises in his high calling is conspicuously felt and known wherever he has favored the people with his presence. Father Huntington has a reputation as one of the best pulpit orators in the country and his spiritual worth cannot be estimated. The secret of his great success must be in his ability to impress his hearers with his faith—faith in himself, faith in human nature, faith in the inevitability of law, faith in an overruling Providence. It is one of his mightiest weapons together with the warmth and sympathetic manner and the masterful, earnest strain of his delivery. One cannot convince people unless he speaks out of a great conviction in his own heart. This power is reinforced by hopes, a cheery optimism, that, by making men feel that the world can be bettered by the effort to sustain, or at least, aim for a Christian character. Father Huntington's qualities are contagious; they are persuasive. Presence is convincing, compelling, often lifting auditors to a higher plane, but men demand more than an intangible influence. They demand that their mental activities be quickened; that they be led to think for themselves. Father Huntington possesses all these qualities in abundance. It is safe to predict that he will receive a warm and hearty reception should he favor Bristol with a return visit. * * *

The United States receive from Germany during the nineteenth century 5,079,362 immigrants.

Civil Service Examination.

Howard R. Thornton, secretary of the local board of civil service examiners, postal department, assisted by Melvin Jeffries, conducted an examination last Saturday of applicants for the positions of letter carriers in Bristol, when the free delivery is established next month. The examinations were held in one of the school rooms of the high school building. Eighteen stood the examination as follows: Harry J. Hughes, James J. Lynn, John G. Street, Edward S. Dougherty, Harry L. Lancaster, Francis G. Ellis, A. Willis Sheppard, Harry J. Lawler, Firman M. Pope, Claude Harris, Neill J. McIlvaine, Owen Silk, John P. Brady, James J. Blanche, Thomas Hoffman, John C. Adams, Augustus Heston, Charles R. Thompson.

A Serious Fall.

Mrs. Maurice Roche, of Linden street, Bristol, met with an accident at her home on Monday morning which she will remember for some time to come. In going down cellar Mrs. Roche stepped upon the platform at the head of the stairs when it gave way beneath her without a moment's warning and Mrs. Roche was precipitated to the floor below, a distance of about ten feet. When picked up she was found to be unconscious. After being carried upstairs a physician was hastily summoned.

Upon examination it was found that no bones were broken but that she was considerably bruised about the back and shoulders. Considering the distance of the fall and the weight of Mrs. Roche, who is a large woman, the escape from very serious injury was miraculous.

Bristol Milk Dealers Caught.

On the 28th day of last August Robert M. Simmers, a state dairy and food inspector, slipped into town and cautiously got possession of sample quantities of milk as sold by most of the Bristol dealers. He returned on Monday last, November 17th, and had warrants issued for four dealers. Analysis of the samples obtained by Mr. Simmers showed that three of the Bristol dealers were selling adulterated milk, while one used formaldehyde as an embalming fluid. One of the men was discharged for the reason that he was simply an employee and was not held responsible for the infraction to the law; the others acknowledged guilt and will pay the minimum fine of $50 and costs amounting to a total of about $60 in each case.

Harry Phipps in Trouble Again.

While returning from a gunning expedition on last Friday evening, Harry Phipps, of Bristol, who was chaperoning a party of gunners, met with an accident that came near causing him and his party to lose their lives. When on the Bath bridge, near the mill pond, his horse became frightened at an approaching trolley car and jumped directly into it. The wagon became wedged between the bridge-rail and the car and some difficulty was experienced in extricating it. The horse was not seriously injured but the wagon was broken into splinters and the harness twisted into a knot. The motorman of the car is alleged to be blamed for the accident as he failed to ring his gong as he rounded the sharp curve at that point and the car could not be seen until it was right upon the bridge. Fred Wilkinson had his nose bruised considerably, but George Campbell, Mr. Phipps and Edward Himmelwright escaped injury by jumping. It has been but a short time since Mr. Phipps had a horse killed and wagon demolished by being struck by the cars at the Lafayette street crossing.

Mrs. Anna M. Brown, aged 74 years, died at her home on the Bristol pike at Edgely on Saturday of paralysis of the stomach. A short funeral service was held at the burying ground when the remains were placed in a family vault at the Ronaldson cemetery, 9th and Fitzwater streets, Philadelphia. The deceased was the widow of the late Moses Brown, who died at the homestead near Bristol twenty-five years ago. Since her husband's death Mrs. Brown has lived practically alone, at her home next to the the Hollings property on the river bank at Edgely. It is roughly estimated that the estate will be valued at about $40,000. By the terms of her will Dr. E. J. Groom and Walter P. Leedom, of Bristol, are named as executors of the estate. The deceased is survived by several brothers and sisters but they do not share in the estate, which after being converted into cash, is to be divided, with the exception of the minor legacies, between the Old Ladies' Home at Wissinoming and the Old Gentlemen's Home at 37th and Baring streets, Philadelphia.

Scaffold Fell, Men Hurt.

Two Bristol young men, who reside on Swain street, John B. Appleton and David Lyndall, both of whom are painters in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, had a miraculous escape from death at Germantown Junction yesterday afternoon. While painting the side of one of the bridges which span the Reading tracks at that point, one of the hooks which held the scaffold upon which they were working broke just after a train had passed under them and the young men fell to the tracks below. Appleton's ankle was badly sprained. He was brought home as quickly as possible and medical aid summoned, but all of Tuesday night he suffered most excruciating pain. Lyndall was apparently uninjured and assisted in bringing Appleton home, but when the excitement subsided he collapsed. A medical examination disclosed painful bruises on the feet and knees. Two other young men, Hiram Vanzant and John M. Dansberry, of Trenton, who were also on the scaffold when the accident occurred, were badly injured, the former having his arm fractured in three places.

The Bristol correspondent of the Philadelphia Record is responsible for the following: Nearly the whole of a small negro settlement, including a church, was sold under the hammer at Newtown yesterday. It was part of the estate of Mrs. Mahala Dickerson, who died a year ago. The whole property brought only $800.65. The old church has not been used for years, the colored settlers having erected a new one. In the church was an organ which had cost $100. It was sold for 30 cents.

Invitations have been issued by Mr. William and Flora Mitchell, of Langhorne, to the wedding of their daughter, Clara, to Morris S. Briggs, on the 26th of November.

DR. ALISON RESIGNS.

SEVERS HIS CONNECTION WITH THE BRISTOL CHURCH TO ACCEPT A CALL OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

The Rev. Alexander Alison, D. D., the pastor of the Presbyterian Church, greatly surprised his congregation last evening by reading from the desk the letter which is published below. As will be seen from the letter referred to Dr. Alison has been honored with an appointment under the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. He will be one of a number of pastor-evangelists who, under salary from the General Assembly Committee on Evangelistic Work, will go to any part of the country to which they shall be sent. They will not remain more than a few weeks in one place. Their work will be to stir up and promote revival work in the churches, Presbyteries and Synods. The keynote of the work will be "Individual Work for Individuals." The letter follows:

My Beloved Friends:

I am under the necessity of saying to you this evening that which I really feel it a cross to express. And yet the duty, however unpleasant, has to be done. Last Wednesday evening, just before prayer meeting, I received through the mail, a formal call to the service of the General Assembly of our church. My new duties, if I accept the call, which I desire to do if I can secure the consent of Presbytery, will probably take me all over the United States, and it may be, an even larger territory, for the great church to which we have the honor to belong seeks to carry out the Saviour's ascending command: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

It is the present plan of our General Assembly to commission a number of pastor-evangelists who shall go out, as the Disciples and Apostles of old did to strengthen the churches. The keynote of the present movement is "Individual Work for Individuals." The most earnest men and women in the church feel that there has been a large departure from the divine standard. Until every individual christian is aroused to the idea that it is the duty of every converted person to be the means of bringing some one else to Christ, there can be no such thing as genuine consecration to all the duties of the christian life. You will, I trust, pardon me for reminding you that my work among you has been largely along that line; that I have kept urging upon you the duty of "individual work for individuals." Nor has it been in vain. The fact that in five years' time within our limited environment, nearly 200 have come into our fellowship, indicates that there has been response to the pastor's pleading and also co-operation. For the help that many of you have given me in this respect I shall ever feel deeply grateful. And yet how much remains to be done. I feel that the fields are already white to the harvest. My first sermon to you, after my summer vacation this year, was from the text "Go ye out into the highways and hedges and compel them to come in that my house may be filled." In that sermon I emphasized, as you will remember, the fact that two monosyllables cover the gospel call. The one is "Come," and the other is "Go." The Saviour says to every man, woman and child, "Come." Then, to those who respond he immediately says "go!" Little did I think when I was preaching that sermon that in so short a time I would receive also from the church the invitation to "go." How can I refuse to obey? I feel that another can carry forward the work here from the point to which the dear Lord has enabled me to bring it and I can go out into the larger field.

Nor do I fail to see the leading of the Holy Spirit. When I went to Northfield for the first time, about four years ago, I was deeply moved by the preaching of that hallowed spot. Ever since I have felt the growing desire to give myself to evangelistic effort. But the way has not before seemed clear. My children are now settled in homes of their own. My wife and I are, therefore, free to go wherever God in His providence may direct the church to lead us. Going out in this kind of work means having no settled home. We are now in a position to meet that condition. The "call," therefore, comes to us at what seems to be a very providential time. It is 25 years this year (last April) since I was licensed to preach the Gospel. For over a quarter of a century I have been priviledged to enjoy the labors of a pastor. While there have been cloudy days in that lengthened experience, I have not seen the day when I have regretted that I gave myself to the work of proclaiming "The Glorious Gospel of the Blessed God."

If I had my life to live over again I would choose the holy ministry with less hesitation that I did before. It was my father's desire from my infancy that I might become a minister. At a certain stage of my studies, I took a violent dislike to it. For a time I could not think of the sacred calling without distaste. But, there came a day when the desire to be a preacher of the gospel overwhelmed me. I finally yielded. From that day I have been given the precious evidence of "soul-winning" that God approved my decision. How greatly I have reason to praise and magnify His Holy Name. He has given me blessing far above my highest exnectations. The two sons he gave me have also entered the sacred office and God is blessing them in their chosen calling. Oh, my friends, what a privilege it is to tell the old, old story of Jesus and His Love. If I had had a dozen sons I would rejoice to see them all in the pulpit. There are discouragements in the work of the ministry. There are such in every vocation. Where is the business or professional man who is free from care and anxiety. In twenty-five years of experience and observation I do varily believe that there are fewer real burdens, humanly speaking, in the ministery than in any other calling. I am now 52 years of age. If I am ever to do a larger work for the Master than a single pastorate affords, I should not delay its beginning to a later period. The one trial to me is in saying the parting word to the noble and faithful ones of this church, who have so devotedly aided me in manifold ways to accomplish what we have. I feel, however, that the present is the most suitable time in all my pastorate to leave you. I am sure that there has been no previous time when I could have retired with less injury to the interests involved. I trust, therefore, you will believe me when I say that in the desire to retire from this field it is not because I am unconscious of your love but because I feel that your affection for me is such that you will not begrudge me the wider sphere of usefulness. It will be five years on the twelfth day of December (next month) since I stood for the first time in your pulpit. I remember it well. A cold, rainy, chilly day it was, just a typical "last month of the year" experience. But, the church inside was warm and cosy. I really enjoyed that service. Since then it has been my privilege to be with you in sunshine and shadow. I felt when I received your call that God had directed you to me and me to you. I am still of that opinion. Although my work here has not been as easy as one might desire, nevertheless, I am not without the hope that God may own and bless it. The future alone may discover. I have endeavored to the best of my ability to be faithful. Sometimes I have had before me and laid upon me the duty, not by any means agreeable, of doing officially what, personally, I would have been glad to avoid. But, duty had to be done.

It may be that in thus taking an official stand, I, at times, got naught save criticism from those who have failed to make the proper mental distinction between the official and the personal. But that is to be expected. I am not without comfort that in some measure I have given this church a motion forward. You are, I venture to suggest, and I do so, I trust, with becoming humility and modesty, in better shape to carry on your work than five years ago. Your splendid Sabbath school equipment, your handsome buildings, scarcely second to any thing of the kind in the State, erected and paid for during my ministry among you; and your general appointments all declare most eloquently the fact that a new pace has been set. May God give you more and greater blessings in the years to come is my heartfelt prayer. But, it seems to me, that another may now take my place and carry forward and complete what the great Head of the Church may have graciously enabled me to begin, while I step down and out into the larger field of spiritual activity.

But I am not going to leave you too suddenly. The Presbytery does not have its next meeting until January 13, 1903. I merely give you this notice at this time that it is my present intention to get things in shape for that meeting of Presbytery. Some time between now and that, probably in the early part of the new year, I shall ask the Session to convene the congregation, ecclesiastically, to take formal action upon my request for dissolution of my pastoral tie. While the General Assembly's committee would prefer to have me at once assume my new duties, I am pleased to be able to say that I have secured permission to delay my going until after the stated meeting of the Presbytery of Philadelphia North in January.

And now, my beloved friends, I desire in the meantime that we should make the most of the intervening weeks. How lovely it would be, if together, everyone connected with our church, officially and otherwise, we might all beseech and besiege the Throne of Grace for the largest blessing this church has ever received in its history. Why cannot every member of this church, young and old, resolve that the next seven or eight weeks shall be fraught with blessings from on high. In so many homes there are those who have not yet decided for Christ. Why may we not resolve that by God's help the present pastorate shall not close without seeing all such inside the household of faith. The next communion season falls on December 7. Let us have for our motto from now on "Individual Work for Individuals." If every one of our members will bring one to Jesus and to the Lord's table next communion we will double our membership roll. And it can be done. It is laid upon you to say "Yes" or "No." Which shall it be? The Holy Spirit is waiting and is ready and able to make your "word fitly spoken," or any spiritual means you may wisely use, successful. May the dear Lord help us, my beloved friends, to believe and to act, for "faith without works is dead." Let us remember the words of the Apostle, "He that converted a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death."

Trusting that the next two months may prove the most fruitful of my whole pastorate, and that experiences may be mine which shall give me inspiration all the rest of my earthly ministry and joy throughout the endless ages, I have the honor to remain, my beloved friends,

Your affectionate pastor,

ALEXANDER ALISON.

HER ANNIVERSARY

By A. C. ROWSEY

Copyright, 1901, by A. C. Rowsey

When the door closed behind "him," she went over to the library table, pulled out a drawer, took from it a small calendar, sighed softly, then marked the last day of the month. She stared thoughtfully at the mark as she made it and turned back the months that had gone since the first of the year. It made her think of the year they were married. It was not many years ago. She laid the calendar aside and flashed out another and another until that first year's lay in her hand. That made her sigh again, for on the dates in that first year's calendar there were no pencil marks to indicate the evening she had spent alone. That was before baby came, before he had become a little lion in the literary world. Society had not then taken him under culture, but now it had. He was going to be a big lion some day, he said. She wondered if he would regret marrying such a spiritless little lioness. She wept dismally.

He used to ask her—it seemed years ago now—to go out with him to be lionized. But there was the baby, so she had refused. But babies do not always need close attention. Nurse could well take care of her, but now he never asked.

She laid the little calendars face downward. With them out of sight she could pity him. It did seem hard to write all day with a thousand things to annoy him. He was entitled to his recreation—the recreation of listening to those who could appreciate his work. She felt her own inability to say bright things, and she hated the heroine and the hero. She wanted to choke them both at the end of the first chapter and reclaim "him" from the tangle of their two hundred odd page existence.

And tonight she was to be alone again. She went into the kitchen of the little flat and dismissed the girl. Then she brought the three-year-old into the library and sat before the fireplace with the child on her knee.

"Now we will finish the story of the fairy princess and the wicked giant," she said, turning over the leaves of the story book.

The child nodded vigorously.

"But the princess did not get hurt when she fell from the castle wall, Edith, you remember that?" the mother inquired.

"No, mamma, taus if she is hurt you'd ky," said the youngster.

"I cry? Why, Edith?"

"Taus you is the princess."

"Me? No, indeed, I am no princess, Edith." She sighed to think of other days when she was a queen, a tinseled one, true, in the first row. Five? Six? It did not seem so many years ago.

"Mamma, you is the princess, isn't you?" The little girl was on the verge of tears.

The new people in the flat across the hall were beginning to move about. The mother listened. The child sat with suspended forefinger. Presently they both heard some one playing. The fingers rippled up and down the keys, then struck up a march from a comic opera. The execution was not perfect, but the time was excellent. The mother's feet itched for movement. Then the music changed to a gavot, then to a skirt dance. Suddenly it stopped.

The mother sighed. For a moment she had been back in the old days. The swish of gauzy skirts was in her ears, the smeary makeup box stood before her eyes, and the old life and fun she had known from girlhood came back.

"If you ain't a princess, you're a fairy," argued the child tenaciously.

A fairy? Some people used to think so.

"Yes, I am a fairy. Do you want to see a fairy mamma, Edith?"

The child shouted with delight.

"All right. Sit here. Don't look around, and I'll go back to fairyland and see."

She flew into her dressing room, opened old trunks, pulled out old slippers and ballet finery.

The makeup box she handled tenderly. "From Ned" it was inscribed. Ned? She paused. What had ever become of him? They had quarreled, he drank so, and she had begged him to give it up. Then—well, she was too deadly respectable, he said.

She found the makeup paint hard to work, but in half an hour she crept softly into the library behind the child. Bending over the sleepy head, she clasped the wee hands and awoke the baby with a kiss.

"You my mamma?" The child turned half fearfully. "Is you my mamma?"

"Yes, dear, I am a fairy mamma now."

The player next door struck up a double shuffle. The little woman broke into the step with a toss of her head. It was ludicrous, of course. "He" would have thought her crazy, but the baby enjoyed it and watched her with dancing eyes, keeping tremulous time with its little feet. The mother danced on. The days of yore had come back. She was before the glaring lights. Presently she stopped, out of breath. In her ears rang the echo of the old time applause. She laughed hysterically and kissed the child. Tears rolled on the grease paint.

"You ain't my mamma. You's little girl fairy. My mamma's a great, big fairy," the child said. The little woman laughed again. She wished—no; if "he" was present he would not understand. He had changed so much since the days he used to hang around the stage door for her to appear.

The music in the adjoining flat trailed away into silence. Then a woman's voice, humming lightly, came across the hall, and again silence. They were closing the piano and turning out the parlor lights.

The mother stood like one transfixed in the center of the library. The laughter died on her lips. She looked down at her beruffled skirts, which had suddenly turned flimsy and tawdry. Then a hard, dry laugh rose in her throat. Yes, that was the way they all dropped from her, the illusions of her youth and her love.

The child lay on the great leather couch, blinking sleepily at her "fairy mamma." The long lashes drooped, and a happy smile crept round the baby mouth. She was in fairyland in truth. With a sob the mother flung herself beside the couch and clasped the dimpled hand in hers. This at least was her own, something real, something tangible and lasting, the blessed mother love.

And so "he" found them three hours later when he returned with the smiles of fair women still dazzling his eyes and their fairer words still ringing in his ears. He bent over her with a frown, but when he saw the tiny furrows which the tears had made through the grease paint his eyes softened. Then he walked to the table and picked up the calendars. His brow was puckered as he studied the queer pencil marks until he found the last one. Then he remembered the day. He turned abruptly toward the graceful figure crouched by the baby form, their two hands tightly clasped. A mist passed before his eyes, and when it was gone he no longer saw the fair, flittering faces of the ballroom. He was back at the stage door of the theater waiting for her.

She started suddenly and found herself in her husband's arms. He was smiling into her eyes the sort of smile that carried her back to that first year.

"What sort of a game is this, Bess?" he asked.

She flushed under the rouge and stammered.

"I was—the baby and I have been taking a trip to fairyland"—

"And the prince came along just in time to wake up the princess," he murmured, with a low laugh that made her think more and more of that first year. And when she looked into his eyes with a sudden impulse she flung her arms about his neck and whispered smilingly:

"I'm so glad I waited for the prince."

And he, looking across the table at the scattered calendars, understood.

A Gluttonous Boy.

A merchant died at Ispahan in the earlier part of last century who had for many years denied himself and his son every support except a crust of coarse bread. On a certain occasion he was overtempted to buy a piece of cheese, but, reproaching himself with extravagance, he put the cheese into a bottle and contented himself and obliged the boy to do the same, with rubbing the crust against the bottle, enjoying the cheese in imagination. One day, returning home later than usual, the merchant found his son eating his crust, which he constantly rubbed against the door.

"What are you about, you fool?" was his exclamation. "It is dinner time, father. You have the key; so, as I could not open the door, I was rubbing my bread against it, as I could not get to the bottle." "Cannot you go without cheese one day, you luxurious little rascal? You'll never be rich." And the angry miser kicked the poor boy for not having been able to deny himself the ideal gratification.

Kind Words Mean Much.

Cultivate kindness of heart, think well of your fellow men, look with charity upon the shortcomings in their lives. Do a good turn for them as opportunity offers, and, finally, don't forget the kind word at the right time. How much a word of kindness, encouragement or appreciation means to others sometimes and how little it costs us to give it!

We do not need to wait for some special occasion. When calamity overtakes a friend, words of sympathy and encouragement are offered sincerely enough, yet in certain respects, as a matter of course. Such an occasion calls for expression on our part, and we naturally respond. But why wait for occasion? Why not speak the kind word when there is no special occasion?—Philadelphia Ledger.

When the Keys Rattled.

"Ha, ha!" laughed the white key. "You are fearfully 'sharp' today."

"Well," retorted the accused one, "I'd rather be 'A sharp' than 'B flat.'"

"Good gracious," shrieked the string, "keep still! I'm highly strung, and my pedal extremities are affected. I know I shall break in 'pieces.'"

"So I note," murmured the bass.

"I'm cleft in twain," moaned the staff.

"My trouble is trebled since young hopeful began to play," said the book for beginners.

"It's all right while he is only 'A minor,' but wait until he begins to be 'A major.'"

And they all started to have a good "time" with the metronome.—New York Times.

Sensible to the Last.

A good story is told of a late Dublin doctor famous for his skill and also his great love of money. He had a constant and enriching patient in an old shopkeeper. This old lady was terribly rheumatic and unable to leave her sofa. During the doctor's visits she kept a one pound note in her hand, which duly went into Dr. C.'s pocket. One morning he found her lying dead on the sofa. Sighing deeply, the doctor approached, and, taking her hand in his, he saw the fingers closed on his fee.

"Poor thing!" he said as he pocketed it! "Sensible to the last!"

Came With Her.

"Your husband," said the talkative man, "has such a gentle disposition. He inherited it from his mother, I suppose?"

"No," replied Mrs. Henpeck significantly, "I think I may safely say that was part of my dowry."—Philadelphia Press.

Easy Descent.

Smith—Poor fellow, he has a hard time getting along, hasn't he?

Brown—He did for awhile, but since he started down hill he finds it comparatively easy.—Chicago News.

What was probably the first public library in the United States was started in Charleston, S. C., in 1749.

It takes 3,000,000 grains of oats to sow an acre, 2,800,000 of barley and only 1,000,000 of wheat.

PATH OF OCEAN CABLES.

Submarine Tablelands That Stretch Across the Atlantic.

There seems to be no logical reason why cables cannot be laid across any section of the oceans of the world, no matter how great the depth. Some portions of the Atlantic cables are three miles below the surface, and this is not necessarily the extreme depth, for the cable may and probably does pass from the top of one submarine hill to another without drooping materially into the deep valleys between, says Lippincott's Magazine. The greatest known depth of the sea is 40,036 feet, or 7 3-5 miles, found in the south Atlantic midway between the island of Tristan da Cunha and the mouth of the Rio de la Plata. Soundings have been made to the depth of 27,480 feet in the north Atlantic south of Newfoundland, and about 34,000 feet, or nearly 6½ miles, is reported south of the Bermudas. Even such enormous depths as these need not hinder cable laying so far as the theory is concerned, but in practice, for reasons of economy in maintenance and otherwise, it is found best to take advantage of favoring conditions in the ocean's bed. To illustrate, all of the cables between the United States and Europe run up along our coast until they reach the neighborhood of Newfoundland before starting across to their destination in Ireland or France. The reason for this is found in the range of submarine tablelands, forming an ideal cable bed, which lies between the three latter countries.

The Sea Trout.

The gamest of salt water fish, after the striped bass, is the weakfish, or sea trout. The sport of angling for them is generally enhanced because, feeding as they generally do near the surface, it is possible to fish for them with light tackle. The best places to find them in the vicinity of New York are Jamaica bay, the southwestern shore of Staten Island and the mouth of the Shrewsbury river. While they have been caught weighing upward of twenty pounds, a six or ten pounder is a good size, and the average will only run from one to two and a half. There is never any doubt when a weakfish bites. He does not nibble around the hook, but takes the bait at one fair swoop and then starts off with it like a limited express with time to make up. He is a shy fish, and the man who uses a small line, light leaders and smells to his hook and keeps quiet while fishing is the one who is apt to have the best luck.—Country Life In America.

When Jackson Dined!

While the dinner hour still clings to the noontime among country people it has advanced in the cities until now it occurs at any time between noon and midnight. And that reminds us, says the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser, of one of the many stories about Colonel Davy Crockett. While he was a member of congress and was at his home in Tennessee some one asked him about the dinner hour in Washington. He said the common people ate dinner at 12, the next above them at 1, the merchants at 2, the representatives at 3, the senators at 4, members of the cabinet at 5 and the vice president at 6. "But when does the president dine?" "What! Old Hickory?" said Crockett, anxious to fix a time that would suit his idea of Jackson's greatness. "Well, he don't eat till next day!"

Women In Paris Streets.

It is quite a feature of Paris to see streams of open carriages, private and hired, taking folks for an after dinner drive along the grand boulevards, which are thronged with promenaders and groups of people sitting outside cafes talking. Now and again a carriage will stop to deposit its burden in front of a cafe and return later, either to this or another to which its occupants have migrated.

With her husband a Frenchwoman may go anywhere, and it is quite customary for the very nicest Frenchwomen to take coffee in the open air outside a cafe and make this a pleasant meeting place for friends.—Exchange.

All Sirloin.

Holman F. Day's "Pine Tree Ballads" tells in verse a number of stories that actually happened "down in Maine," and are remembered there today by old narrators. One relates to Barney McGauldrie, a landlord of that state, at whose house famous men liked to stay, that they might enjoy a merry joke.

Barney was always loyal to his friends. At one time a new meat dealer came to town and tried to secure the landlord's trade.

"I have always bought meat of Jed Haskell," said Barney, "and I guess I won't change."

"But," said the other, "old Haskell doesn't know his business. He doesn't even know how to cut meat."

"Well," drawled Barney, "I've always found that he knows enough about it to cut sirloin steak clear to the horn, and that's good enough for me."

The Penguin's Bump of Locality.

On shore the penguin is an awkward creature. Water is its element. When hunted on the ice floes, the birds generally try to run away in an upright position, but just as the hunter thinks he has got one the bird lies down on its white belly and paddles along over the snow very quickly, the hard, smooth quills slipping over the snow crystals almost without friction. A remarkable characteristic of the penguin is his bump of locality. Both on shore and in the water he never loses his way. To human eyes one ice floe is precisely like another, but under that roof of similar ice floes I have seen a penguin of the larger species find its mate on a floe after diving and swimming for a full mile under water.—Leslie's.

An Infallible Result.

Briggs—My wife has had a wonderful cure. She has recovered her voice after being unable to utter a word for nearly six months.

Griggs—You don't mean it! How did it come about?

Briggs—In the most unexpected way. We happened to call at a neighbor's where they were playing cards. We thought we might as well take a hand. What was the result? In less than five minutes my wife was asking in a strong, clear voice, "What's trumps?"—Boston Transcript.

Eternity.

An unconventional preacher undertook to give his hearers a vivid conception of eternity. This is the way he did it: "If a little sparrow were to dip its bill in the Atlantic ocean and take one drop of water and then take one hop a day across the country and put that drop in the Pacific ocean and then hop back to the Atlantic, one hop a day, until the Atlantic was dry as a bone, it wouldn't be sun-up in hades."

Only One Key That Fits

We have found that nearly all the general medicines that are popular seek first to promote appetite and help digestion, then to apply needed elements which almost all ailing people require.

Probably iron is the most important of these needed elements, yet it is very hard to give iron so it will do any good.

There are thousands of keys in the world—only one or two unlock your door. So we know of only one or two combinations of iron that seem to do the work.

By far the most generally useful prescription we know of is Vinol. We mention this by name, because we know what it is made of, how it is made, and how wonderfully helpful it has been in numerous cases in this very town.

Vinol contains the medicinal qualities of cod liver oil, iron-that-can-be-digested, and a little table wine. It is pleasant to take, and we have so much faith in it that we will sell a bottle to anyone suffering from loss of appetite, a run-down condition, tendency to colds, or to weak women and pale children, etc., and cheerfully give you the money back if it does not help you.

RHINOCEROS HUNTING.

The Killing of a Big Rhino on the Banks of the Nile.

I was dashing along, confident that the rhino must be far ahead, when Zowanji whistled. I could see nothing till he pointed out the brute lying quite close to me. The sun beating on her mud caked hide made it blend so perfectly with the red earth and yellowish grass that I should have walked right up without seeing her. She sprang to her feet. We both fired. She made a short dash toward us, but thought better of it and rushed down a small slope on to a flat bed of short reeds. Here she turned again and defied us. Again the heavy guns roared. She spun round and round several times, staggered, recovered and dashed off only to stop, however, under the next tree. The .303s cracked, and in a wild chorus of thankful yells she toppled over, rose again, spun round and finally subsided into the grass. We went up quite close to finish her. She fought hard to rise and have a last charge, but the little pencil-like bullet again sped on its sad errand, and the game old relic of prehistoric times breathed her last. We were sad men as we gazed upon her grotesque, misshapen form. Somehow one feels such a blatant upstart in the presence of the pachyderms when one thinks of the unbroken line that dates back unchanged into the unthinkable ages of the past.—Ewart Grogan in Outing.

The Headsman's Perquisites.

Strange and unreasonable laws guaranteed to the headsman his full share of emoluments. He was well paid for his work and never suffered from a dull season. From the towns he received poultry and fodder, from the monasteries fish and game. The Abbaye de Saint-Germain gave him every year a pig's head, the Abbaye de Saint-Martin five loaves of bread and five bottles of wine. Cakes were baked for him on the eve of Epiphany. For each leper in the community he exacted—heaven knows why—a tax at Christmas time. Les filles de joie were his vassals. It was his privilege to seize in the market place as much corn as he could carry away in his hands, and the peasants thus freely robbed submitted without a murmur, crossing themselves with fervor as he passed. He had the power to save from death any woman on her way to the scaffold, provided he were able and willing to marry her. He was the first official called to the body of a suicide, and, standing on the dead man's breast, he claimed as his own everything he could touch with the point of his long sword.—Agnes Repplier in Harper's Magazine.

Why a Man Shouldn't.

There are two things that should keep a man from worrying—if he have no reason for worrying, there's no use worrying, if he have a reason, there is no use.—Los Angeles Herald.

Time seems most untimely when he brings a woman to the turn of life. Life is or should be at its ripest and best for her, and she approaches this change with a dread of its effect born of her knowledge of the sufferings of other women at this season.

There is not the slightest cause for fear or anxiety at this period if Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is used. It gives health of body and cheerfulness of mind, and by its aid the pains and pangs of this critical period are prevented or cured.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is woman's medicine with a wonderful record of cures of womanly diseases. Diseases that all other medicines had failed to cure, have been perfectly and permanently cured by the use of "Favorite Prescription."

"I feel it my duty to write you as I have received so much benefit from the use of your medicine" says Mrs. Lizzie A. Bowman, of New Matamoras, Washington Co., Ohio. "I have taken four bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' for female weakness and change of life. Before I began taking it I could not do anything. I had such pains in my head and in the back of my neck that I thought I would lose my mind. Now I can work every day. I recommend Favorite Prescription to all females suffering in the period of change of life. It is the best medicine I have found."

"Favorite Prescription" has the testimony of thousands of women to its complete cure of womanly diseases. Do not accept an unknown and unproved substitute in its place.

Keep the bowels healthy by the timely use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.
